Float end on viewports sized SM (small) or wider
 Float end on viewports sized MD (medium) or wider
 Float end on viewports sized LG (large) or wider
 Float end on viewports sized XL (extra-large) or wider

```
Float end on viewports sized SM (small) or wider
Float end on viewports sized MD (medium) or wider
Float end on viewports sized LG (large) or wider
Float end on viewports sized XL (extra-large) or wider

Float

These utility classes float an element to the left or right, or disable floating, based on the current viewport size using the CSS float property. Important is included to avoid specificity issues. These use the same viewport breakpoints as our grid system.

Overflow

Adjust the overflow property on the fly with four default values and classes. These classes are not responsive by default. This is an example of using `.overflow-auto` on an element with set width and height dimensions. By design, this content will vertically scroll.
